

A German noncommissioned officer who, having fought in the ranks of the army nearly three years, was wounded, adjudged, and finally deserted, and now has taken refuge in Denmark.

By Major C. Hemmelmann.

(Copyright, by International News Bureau.)

With a blush on my face I bear witness against my Fatherland, for he has forgotten himself.

I enlisted as a volunteer for a year, in the Eighty-eighth Regiment of the infantry, a part of the Forty-second Infantry Brigade.

When war was declared, because of my knowledge of French, I was appointed interpreter for the small staff of my battalion. I occupied this post for two years, and until I was put into active service after being severely wounded at Verdun.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

Perhaps the number of these pages will fear that I have exaggerated at times, but I have recounted only the events that I have seen with my own eyes.

Immediately after the assassination at Sarajevo of the archduke, Austria, a certain unrest began to show itself in Germany. People said that this event would bring grave complications and the Germans would find themselves entangled and that a European war would result.

Our alarm, alas, was not in vain. For on the morning of the 23rd of July, 1914—that the Austrian ultimatum was given to Serbia, by order of the commander of our division we were told that some maneuvers for which we were preparing were countermanded, and that we were to get ready for a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

At the end of the week the bridges of a general mobilization.

Richmond Times-Dispatch

RICHMOND, VA., SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1918.

PRICE, SEVEN CENTS

live information, under penalty of severe punishment.

For having arrested the Mayor of Arlon as a hostage. He will be put at liberty as soon as the city conforms to the orders and guarantees are given.

A special detachment was ordered to proclaim this document. It was composed of two noncommissioned officers, two drummers, two trumpeters and eight privates.

At each street corner the drums sounded and the civilians gathered to listen to the proclamation.

Each, I must have read it at least thirty times before getting back to the barracks. I was to stay with the Mayor and Löffelhardt. Several officers went inside before Commander Schmidt came out again into the city to get the Mayor and Löffelhardt.

In the streets we saw many soldiers talking with the civilians by signs, and it was very quiet.

In many shops the soldiers were taking merchandise by force without paying for it, and making the shopkeepers take so many francs for their goods.

Another soldier, however, who was a would-be purchaser of jewels, he put in his pocket all the woman showed him, and was going out with his booty when he (Merbach) saw the woman slap him in the face and made him give up the stolen jewels.

Later in the evening, a soldier was passing in front of the police station, a shot from a revolver was fired at him, but he was not hurt. The wife of an agent of the police, he was immediately arrested and taken to a court-martial.

I acted as interpreter.

The accused was named Louis Emperer, and he was married and the father of four children. He was opening of the trial I was able to say words to him, telling him that as he had a good understanding of French, I would be able to interpret for him.

The trial began, and Emperer was accused of having fired upon the soldiers, and of having disobeyed the proclamation of the general mobilization.

After questioning the men, they were not allowed to give any statement that they were innocent and that they themselves had fired upon the soldiers, given over to the soldiers, and the soldiers could not carry away with them the things they had stolen.

On the 12th of August I went with an automobile with Merbach, Löffelhardt and two other officers to the town of Arlon, where we were to see the photographs and estimate the possibilities of an attack in this direction.

We found requisitions in the town of Arlon, Löffelhardt, who was a good driver, led.

The station of it was situated in the middle of a large and beautiful park. Upon our arrival the steward came to meet us. He took us into his own house, where his daughter, a sixteen or seventeen years, begged us to spare her. We assured her that we were not making a house call, and she need not be afraid. Her mother was sick in bed.

After having visited the chateau and seen some arms, we visited the cellar, which were full of wine and of all sorts of provisions. Merbach, not wishing to carry off anything, we went from the commander, sealed all the doors and gave to the steward a paper forbidding any one who would take anything in the chateau.

Soon after our return we gave our report to the commander of the 8th, who had seen no enemy, and then he returned to our commander to tell him of our discovery. He authorized us to return to the chateau and to return with the wine and provisions that we wished. The drum-major went with us to help us carry the provisions.

We had taken all the keys, and I looked around for the steward, but great was my surprise to find the house empty and in disorder. A Norman who was passing by told us what had happened.

One of the soldiers of the Forty-second Brigade had gone to the house of the steward, and after taking the provisions, he had been shot and killed. They had taken everything, and what they could not carry away they had broken to pieces. I asked the Norman who was passing by about the young girl, but he could tell nothing about her.

We returned to the chateau and finished loading the contents of the cellar upon the carts and carriages that we found in the courtyard. We carried off also the horses in the stables.

In the meanwhile, Merbach was taking a great trunk with him and returning to the city. He had a good deal of it to his friends. One of the officers of the second battalion carried in the month of September a watch—a souvenir of this pillage.

COMMANDER CONGRATULATES LOOTERS OF CHATEAU

We took all the saddles and harnesses from the stables, and when we returned to Commander Schmidt he congratulated us on our success.

We lived at Arlon and Luxembourg till nearly the last of August. It was an agreeable existence. Merbach, Löffelhardt and I were sent out to reconnoiter almost every day in an automobile. But Merbach always took us to Luxembourg, where we passed our time. Upon our return we were given a sketch of some place where we had not put foot and declare that we had not seen any traces of the enemy. And the general von der Beech was charmed to have such good soldiers.

When we received orders to leave Arlon the soldiers were sorry, for they would have much preferred to stay there, eating, drinking and smoking in positions, and from the inhabitants of the country.

For two days we advanced, watching on all sides in fear of a surprise. The 20th of August witnessed our first battle, and it was demonstrated to me how men like Merbach, of the sweetest disposition, could in a moment become cruel under the excitement of battle.

A patrol which came from Löffelhardt announced that we could go on without danger, for this section had not been occupied by the enemy. After eating the soup prepared for us by the traveling kitchen, we went on forward. Suddenly we heard upon our right an unexpected noise. Soon we knew what it was. It was a shell, and many Belgians fired most accurately, and were, unfortunately, aided by our own artillery, which in firing on the enemy reached us too.

For we were really, as was to be expected, only in books. Men struck by a bullet raised their arms in the air, waved and held their hands up in the shouts of the soldiers and the non-commissioned officers. Captain Emperer, however, and died that same night. Lieutenant Emperer was wounded, and fell to the ground unconscious.

Suddenly the village of Lengler became a scene of confusion. The soldiers received orders to take it. Lieutenant Emperer, an officer beloved by all the soldiers, was killed. At the same moment that he gave an order, Lieutenant Emperer fell at the same time.

When we entered at last into Lengler it presented a desolate sight to our eyes. On all sides the houses were burning. The streets were packed with the bodies of soldiers and horses. A Belgian officer had fallen across a ditch, and his body was being charred, his face was convulsed with frightful anguish. The unfortunate man had been shot in the head and was being slowly burned to death.

As Merbach and I were at a telephone station with our orders, suddenly we heard cries of women and children, and going out into the street we saw in the midst of a troop of officers and soldiers a group of four men, two women and five children. The soldiers had kicked them and beaten them with the butts of their rifles, and were crying out that they were the ones that had fired upon Colonel Kriemhild, commander of the Eighty-eighth Infantry, who was wounded, and afterwards died in Germany.

Who could tell who were the guilty ones, or the French, Belgian or German? Merbach protected these poor people, and handed them over to a woman, holding a small baby in her arms, and beaten with the butt-end of a gun and was pierced by a bayonet wound. I do not know what became of the baby.

In front of the station a young officer, he, Eighty-seventh Infantry, was commissioned officer and two men to set fire to a hotel under pretext that it was from this house that the soldiers had been fired upon. Von Kriemhild. These three men went first into the hotel, and then they found it. They tried to keep all the champagne for themselves. The house was finally fired, and many of the soldiers were destroyed in the same way.

Toward evening Merbach and I were sent on to look out for a ration. In a narrow road between two hills we found across a group of German soldiers, and in their midst we saw a French lieutenant, badly wounded. When he saw us, this officer called out to us, "I wish you would save me from these savage beasts." He had a ball in his abdomen, and was suffering terribly. Merbach, suddenly angry, said to him brutally, "Taken as you say, and do not use such language to brave soldiers who are fighting to save you." He said no more. Upon my word, I will not leave before you die before my eyes."

"Lieutenant Merbach," said another officer who had just come back, "he is an officer like yourself, and that he is wounded." But Merbach said nothing. He only stayed to watch the man die. I told this incident to Commander Schmidt.

After this incident, Merbach was promoted to command of the Eighty-eighth Infantry. He was killed in the battle of Betrix, Merbach was killed by a French soldier, who gave him a blow on the head with the butt of his musket. Merbach was one of the best friends.

When we lay among the dead and the wounded, and there were cries of anguish on all sides. It was impossible for a good many of us to sleep on account of the noise and confusion. Some of the soldiers thanked Heaven for protecting them, and others begged to be killed. I saw a French soldier and a Belgian. When we did fall off for a minute, nightmare or a sharp pain in the head would wake us up. At dawn we set out again, marching toward Neufchateau. In the morning we had the French supported by the camp of Belgian cyclists.

BATTLE OF BETRIX

After leaving Lengler we entered the forest of Hupont, where we took a little rest. Almost all of the people of the town of Hupont were in the field in haste, leaving their houses intact, open to the hands of the Germans, who had taken everything they could find. The soldiers threw furniture and household effects out of the windows, just for amusement. Schmidt went to look for the house, but he found no one who went into the houses, but the men did what they wanted to, and obeyed neither Schmidt nor any one else.

The Seventh Company received orders to storm the edge of the woods and to begin the battle. The first one to be killed was First Lieutenant Bertram, shot by a German soldier named Schelling, in an act of punishment of three days' imprisonment inflicted upon him before the war by Bertram. This man was not punished, but he received soon after the Iron Cross for bravery. Later on, wounded in battle, he died in a hospital at Neufchateau.

The battle of Betrix was one of the most important in which our battalion took part. The French were in an advantageous position, did all they could to prevent our advance, and we were obliged to fight out all our reserves to prevent retreat. In this desperate battle there was equal bravery on both sides. The French artillery and machine guns were very accurate, and we lost many men. Soldiers in great numbers fell dead or wounded, and we could not find one, for each of us had all we could do to keep under shelter from the balls and bombs. We believed that all was lost, and that we would have to retreat, when, fortunately, the Third Regiment of Artillery from the fortress of Mayence came to our aid. They overpowered by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At last, when the artillery began firing, our attack began to turn, and some of our soldiers got possession of some French cannon. The French artillery ceased their cannon gun in hand, and died bravely for their country. The Prussians then filled the air with cheers, while the French, seeing that their attack was just as good as overthrown by the French fire, officers and men then began to drag the cannon and push forward the trucks, so that the French fire was not so effective, but many were killed. At